HIS DEATH SHOULDN'T BE IN VAIN

Mum determined to see play area built in memory of son

A GRIEVING mother who lost her son in a tragic accident will have to wait and see if the council will build a play area where he died.

Danielle O'Brien was left devastated in September when her 13-year-old son Cagney fell 20ft to his death from a makeshift rope swing at Monks Way on the Buckland estate.

She vowed to collect 1,000 signatures in a petition to have a skate park built in the place where he fell to give children in the community somewhere to play.

In a statement, Dover council said: "Our thoughts remain with the family and community following this tragedy. We already work with communities and provide facilities for young people, such as the exciting new skate park in Pencester Gardens, as well as the large sports ground near the Linces in Buckland, and there is a BMX track close to this.

"We are aware of the petition, and have been in contact with the family earlier this year to discuss a request for a memorial plaque in the area, and we would welcome continued discussions with the family on this."

Asked if this meant the council had

Tory blog prompts row over 'stupidity' of idea

■ BY GARETH DORRIAN

A PARLIAMENTARY hopeful who thinks three monuments could be looked after by Dover council is talking "complete nonsense", say his political opponents.

Prospective Tory MP Charlie Elphicke has been slated for living in "fantasy land" after he attacked English Heritage for stopping weddings and parties from taking place at Dover, Deal and Walmer castles.

On his elphicke.com internet blog, Mr Elphicke claims the English Heritage decision will damage the district financially and suggested Dover District Council should manage the sites.

After complaining Deal castle should have more tourist attractions and some sort of museum, he says: "That's why I think Deal and Walmer castles (at least the management!) should be handed over to the district council – or anyone else who feels like doing a proper job. We are not getting the best out of these amazing resources on our doorstep."

Archaeologist and district councillor Mike Eddy said Mr Elphicke had got it completely wrong: "It's the sheer stupidity of what he's saying, it's complete nonsense. What English Heritage did was make a business decision. Perhaps they weren't getting the numbers of people in to the castles to continue offering the wedding and function services?"

ATTACK: Mike Eddy has accused Charlie Elphicke of ignorance following comments about the management of Dover castle

"We can see Mr Elphicke is clearly ignorant of Dover District Council's poor reputation for management of our historic buildings. DDC was keen to rip the mechanism out of the timeball tower and turn it into a holiday let. The trust now taking on the Astor Theatre is faced with major refurbishment works after DDC 'looked after' it.

"I'm surprised Mr Elphicke doesn't know Deal castle is not a good exhibition venue. The basement and moat are prone to flooding which makes the place damp. It would be an act of criminal irresponsibility if Deal Town Council (or anyone else) were, as he suggests, to put its art collection in there."

Dover and Deal MP Gwyn Prosser said: "These castles are responsible for huge and complex liabilities. A district council is well able to look after gala events and allotments. The very thought of a district council running these important locations amounts to living in fantasy land."

But Mr Elphicke told Yourdover that Mr Eddy and Mr Prosser's comments amounted to mischief-making.

"There is all the difference in the world between ownership, maintenance and day-to-day management and I know that," he said.

"There are lots of great monuments in private ownership. I was talking about the day-to-day running of these sites. Of course Dover District Council hasn't got the millions of pounds to pay for everything needed to run these monuments.

"But so much more could be done. Someone with an entrepreneurial spirit could manage the castles and do a lot to attract more tourists to the area."

Mr Elphicke said Dover hadn't got enough "great family days out" or exciting family attractions to bring in more visitors.

He added that he was trying to look to the future and not the past, as he thinks his opponents do.

DDC leader and fellow Tory Paul Watkins said: "We are very flattered by Charlie Elphicke's confidence in DDC to undertake the management of these three castles. The financial liabilities of looking after these monuments are quite horrendous."

Mr Watkins said Cllr Eddy's reference to DDC's reputation in this area was unfounded. He said the Astor Theatre had been leased to charitable organisations for more than 20 years and the council wasn't entirely responsible for activities inside but was only in charge of essential maintenance.

Keith 'kept his sense of humour to the last'

Friends share fond memories

■ BY JAMES ALEXANDRE

FRIENDS and colleagues have paid tribute to Dover Harbour Board's marketing manager Keith Southey, who has died at the age of 53 after a long illness.

A pupil at Astor College and South Kent College, Mr Southey joined the Dover Express at 17 and spent more than 20 years at the paper; he reported on the Zeebrugge disaster and interviewed survivors in Belgium.

He later joined the Dover Harbour Board, where he worked as PR and marketing manager for 22 years before being diagnosed with a brain tumour.

Following an operation at the beginning of this year, Mr Southey had started to make a recovery at a nursing home in Temple Ewell but then suffered a relapse.

He was taken to the William Harvey Hospital in Ashford on Monday night and died in the early hours of Tuesday.

Mr Southey's former news editor at the Dover Express, Terry Sutton, said: "Keith was a very popular and very good reporter and always treated his subjects sympathetically, especially in his interviews with the Zeebrugge survivors.

MISSED: Keith Southey was a 'thoroughly nice bloke'

"He was very interested in sport and was a great supporter of Dover Athletic.

"He also had his own sailing dinghy and used to take it out and sail from the harbour."

Paul Youden, who knew Mr Southey when they were both journalists and later worked with him at the harbour board, said: "Keith was a wonderful guy - he wouldn't say boo to a goose. He was held in very high regard and will be sorely missed.

"All of us went round at various times to meet him at the nursing home and have a bit of lunch and take him for a drive, so the news came as a sudden shock."

Childhood friend Nick Stevens said Keith was "quite simply the nicest, calmest and loveliest person you could ever wish to share life's experiences with".

He added: "We've been friends ever since he and his brother and me with mine first kicked a football together as young boys at Elms Vale recreation ground in the early 60s, which I'm immensely proud and privileged to say established a life-long friendship.

"I will always treasure those moments and the great times we had together in our early years, through the school years and later in our working lives together - memories that can never be taken away."

Brian Rees, who joined the Express when Mr Southey was a senior reporter there, said:

"He was very kind to me in those formative years of my career, offering gentle support, guidance, encouragement and plenty of leg-pulling. He had a wicked sense of humour.

"He soon became more like a big brother than a colleague. What struck me latterly was that against all the odds he managed to keep that sense of humour to the last.

"What a thoroughly nice bloke. He'll be sadly missed by many, many people. My very sincere condolences to his family."

Keith leaves behind his wife Bettina and two teenage sons.

His funeral is due to be held on Friday, July 17, at 11am in St Mary's Church.

Book chalks up recognition of town's appeal

BILLOWING chalk cliffs, shifting panoramas and opulent yachts taking their ease from the up-Channel haul.

These are extracts taken from a new book, Beside the Seaside, which celebrates life by the coast in Dover during the early 60s, along with other coastal retreats in the UK.

Its release to bookshops nationwide will come as a welcome break from recent criticism, where the town was dubbed "depressing" in the latest edition of the Lonely Planet Guide to Britain.

The book, which is edited by Ruth Petrie, brings together archives taken from the Guardian's extensive collection with well-known author Geoffrey Moorhouse taking on Dover.

The extract is dated September 1961 and mentions major past events in the town, including the first Channel swim, Louis Bleriot's flight across the Channel and the two World Wars.

Moorhouse writes: "With the exception of London itself, no place in the British Isles perpetuates our self-indulgent image as unflinchingly as Dover."

He goes on to talk about the famous white cliffs and "their promise of solidarity and independence".

The extract also describes the bustle around the seafront, describing it as "busy as Waterloo Station."

District councillor Nigel Collor, who was born and bred in the town, told Yourdover he thinks it is still possible to get the bustle back to Dover.

"We need to start talking the place up and get recognition - we still have the assets here and I really think we can get the vibrancy back," he said.

Beside the Seaside is £14.99 and available from www.guardianbooks.co.uk.

ruled out the possibility of building the park, a spokesman would only refer this paper back to the statement.

Speaking to Yourdover last year, Danielle said the existing BMX park was in ruin, otherwise Cagney would have been playing there instead of on the rope swing.

This week her petition hit the 900 mark, giving her the hope she needed that something might be done. She said: "We're still collecting signatures at the moment - it's amazed me how many people care."

"To be honest, anything would be good - it doesn't have to be a skate park, just somewhere the children here can go and play safely."

Tributes are still being left at the site and Danielle hopes to make the area where her son died a happy place where he can be remembered.

"I also think people should be aware that if they see a rope swing or anything like that which is a danger to people, they should report it to the fire brigade so they can cut it down," she said.

Modern medieval map to take pride of place in keep

■ BY MARIJKE COX

A HUSBAND and wife team from Worcester have recreated a medieval world map as part of the multi-million pound restoration of Dover Castle's keep.

According to English Heritage, this is the first serious attempt in modern times to create such a piece and experts say it is "highly authentic".

Phil and Tamara Pleasant have used the Sawley Map, the only surviving English 12th century 'Mappa Mundi' or world map in Cambridge, for inspiration and reference.

The recreation has been crafted on calfskin using authentic materials, including ink made of oak galls and paint ground from natural pigments and 23.5 carat gold leaf.

Following ancient Greek tradition, Asia is at the top, Europe to the left, Africa to the right and at the centre of the world is the island Delos.

HISTORY: An artist's impression of the keep Steven Brindle, an historian at English Heritage, said: "Medieval maps are laden with meanings and convey a view typified by a fear of god and the end of time, but also in awe of the wonder of creation."

"Phil and Tamara's dedication to an ancient craft means that not only do we have a highly authentic piece of re-creation but a beautiful piece of art. The result is quite unseen in this country before, which would have convinced a 12th century court as it will impress the 21st century viewer."

The map will take centre stage of the King's Hall at Dover Castle's keep, where a £2m transformation is due to be opened on August 1.

A SECOND Konik foal has been born at High Meadow nature reserve near Dover.

Children are being invited to suggest names for the new arrival, which is part of a herd of Konik horses released near Dover Grammar School for Boys.

And on Saturday, August 1, from 2pm-5pm, a name-the-foal event is being held at the reserve. There will be stalls and entertainment, with the winning name announced at 4pm.

Top prize is tickets to the Wildwood animal park, near Canterbury. The herd, which belongs to the Wildwood Trust, was released to restore the grassland.

To enter the competition, choose male and female names, say why you chose them and send a postcard with your name, school and contact number to White Cliffs Countryside Project, 6 Cambridge Terrace, Dover CT16 1JT by Friday, July 31.

Channel and both world wars. Mr Moorhouse writes "With the exception of London itself, no place in the British Isles perpetuates our self-indulgent image as unflinchingly as Dover".

He goes on to talk about the famous white cliffs and "their promise of solidarity and independence".

He writes: "Men have been known to weep with relief at the sight of them. Others are said to have shaken their fists in frustration at their symbolism – a fossilised assurance that Britons shall never be slaves."

The extract also describes the bustle around the seafront, describing it as "busy as Waterloo station".

District councillor Nigel Collor, who was born and bred in the town, told Yourdover he thought that it was still possible to get the bustle back to Dover.

"We need to start talking the place up and get recognition. We still have the assets here and I really think we can get the vibrancy back," he said.

"Regeneration is starting. We just need that last oomph and things will really begin to move forward."

In the book, Mr Moorhouse talks about the dangers of the Goodwin Sands and stresses that "Dover remains a port to reckon with" in comparison with other Cinque Port towns.

In the final passage, he refers to the Channel Tunnel, which was built 33 years later.

"At the foot of the Shakespeare Cliff is a tunnel which they dug in 1881, which stretches 2,000 yards under the sea, and which would have gone to Cap Griz Nez if the chauvinists had not had their way."

"If ever we are ever to have a Channel Tunnel this could well be the English end of it. The Gateway to England would sit splendidly among those cliffs."

Beside The Seaside is priced £14.99 and available from www.guardianbooks.co.uk.

FIVE-STAR UPGRADE ON THE MENU

A restaurant in the Alkham Valley has been ranked among the top ten per cent of places to eat in the UK.

The Marquis, near Dover, was highly commended by AA inspectors after scooping a five-star rating two months ago.

The fine-dining restaurant has now been upgraded to five yellow stars which puts it among Britain's top eateries.

Manager Ben Walton said: "Getting five stars was a real achievement, but to be upgraded to yellow stars is fantastic. Yellow stars are only awarded to those offering the very highest quality, so we're delighted."

The restaurant has attracted praise from a number of food and travel writers, with famous guests, including the team from Top Gear, stopping off to stay in the five luxury bedrooms.

The Marquis offers a lunch and dinner menu with two courses for £15.50 and £17.95 respectively and the bar is open to non-residents and non-diners.

WE'RE READY FOR ACTION: Dover lifeboat coxswain Stuart Richardson with crewman Martin Collins

We'd be all at sea without the RNLI

WHEN there's trouble at sea the men and women of the Dover lifeboat are always ready to drop everything in the hope of saving a life.

The 30 crew – who give their time for free – turn up eagerly at the RNLI station regardless of the time of day, according to coxswain Stuart Richardson.

"We can only take seven of the crew on the boat, but a lot of the time they all show up wanting to help out," he said.

"It works on a rota basis. It's funny – they're often reluctant to admit they went on the last call-out in the hope that they can go on the next one.

"Those who don't come usually stay at the lifeboat station in case they're needed when we return."

Mr Richardson, 37, who has been coxswain of the Dover lifeboat for almost two years, said being part of the RNLI was a way of life: "We don't see it as job. Aside from training them up, being enthusiastic is the main thing we look for in volunteers."

Since January, the crew have been called out 29 times to deal with stranded sailors, grounded yachts and, last week, the unpleasant task of retrieving a body from rocks near Folkestone.

Crewman Martin Collins said: "Although it's hard, you get used to things like that. After I dealt with my first dead body I thought 'Right, I've done my first one' and you have to move on."

Relying solely on donations, the RNLI is one of many organisations hit hard by the recession.

■ BY MARIJKE COX

Despite fund-raising events and generous donations, a knock-on effect from the downturn has led to a drop in funding which goes towards training, equipment and maintenance to the City of London II lifeboat.

Mr Richardson said: "We try to have a money reserve covering 12 months, so if we run out of money we can survive another year. But at the moment we only have a five-month reserve. We really need to get this up."

Dover lifeboat crew work closely with the coastguard and other onshore and offshore lifeboats along the south coast.

As well as carrying out rescues, they offer advice to yachtsman and check boats are shipshape before they head to sea.

Mr Richardson said: "As much as we like going out on rescues, we would rather people were safe and didn't get into trouble."

"Our job is about helping people when they are struggling at sea, but a main factor is prevention. With the recession, more people are staying in the UK to holiday, but they may not be able to afford repairs to their boats so we are here to offer advice to make trips safer for them."

With the Channel being one of the busiest shipping lanes in the world, the lifeboat is an important part of Dover. Mr Richardson said: "This isn't just our lifeboat – it's a big part of the community."

"People should never be worried about calling the emergency services if they see someone in trouble at sea. It all helps save lives."

The crew are taking part in the Dover Regatta dragon boat race to raise money. To sponsor them, phone 01304 204280.

Drummer Jade performs out of her skin

A YEAR seven pupil at Archers Court School in Dover has soared to success in music – passing an exam six months earlier than expected.

Jade Ellyson, aged 12, sat her grade one drum-kit exam and passed with merit despite taking just 20 lessons.

The youngster also made it through to the final of the Musician of the Year competition and helped deliver percussion workshops to pupils at Sibertswold Primary.

Her success follows the introduction of free music lessons to all year seven pupils at Archers Court.

Michael Yeoman, director of music at the school, said: "I am absolutely delighted with Jade's exam success and we're all proud of the hard work she and the other students have put in since the project began."

"This is just the start of an even more successful year to come in the music department."

Head-teacher Elaine Hamilton said music was really taking off at the school.

"Music is becoming an integral part of our community here at Archers Court and the response we have had to these initiatives and projects has been simply fantastic," she said.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Bar loses outdoor licence

A BAR in Dover has had the licence on its outdoor terrace removed after an inspection by the fire service.

Owners of the Funky Monkey bar in Bench Street were told their premises licence had been reduced so the smoking area was no longer covered.

It followed a visit from Kent Fire and Rescue Service, which was concerned about a wooden structure that had been built over the outside terrace.

Officers said in the event of a fire there was a likelihood of significant injury or death.

Dover council licensing manager Tony Bartlett said: "In difficult economic times we understand businesses will try different means to increase income."

"However, our primary concern has to be safety and we encourage businesses to talk to us before carrying out works like this."

The owners have 21 days to appeal.

Neighbourhood forums

RESIDENTS are being invited to the next round of neighbourhood forum meetings.

Dover North discussions will be held today (Wednesday) from 7pm, at Pines Calyx in St Margaret's Bay.

Talks will be on making communities greener, with speakers from environmental charity the St Margaret's Bay Trust and climate-change campaigners Deal With It.

A Sandwich neighbourhood forum is being held tomorrow (Thursday) from 7pm at St Mary's Church hall, Church Street, Eastry.

Doors open at 6.30pm.

Jo Causon, the institute's chief executive, said the score was exceptional and made a benchmark for world-class customer service.

Castle's memorial plaque fine tribute to Lord Sandy

A PLAQUE has been unveiled at the new visitor information centre at Dover Castle in memory of former English Heritage chairman Lord Sandy Bruce-Lockhart.

It was unveiled at a ceremony on Thursday by his wife Lady Bruce-Lockhart in front of their son Mark and officials from local authorities.

Lord Bruce-Lockhart, who was Tory leader of Kent County Council in the 1990s and made a life peer in 2006, died of cancer last summer.

Before he was diagnosed, he had been appointed by the Government to chair English Heritage and became instrumental in helping secure the Sea Change fund for Dover.

The vital funding means a number of regeneration projects can start and the new visitor information centre at the castle – which has been dedicated to Lord Bruce-Lockhart – could be completed.

Inspirational

Simon Thurley, English Heritage chief executive, said he was an inspirational and respected leader.

He said: 'A memorial plaque at Dover's great castle, with its strategic and commanding location on the white cliffs, will serve as a lasting tribute to a great man.'

The new visitor information centre is part of a range of works taking place at the castle to attract more tourists.

The glass and timber-clad building was designed by award-winning architects Wilkinson King and is almost twice the size of the previous temporary one.

There are 300,000 visitors per year to the castle, but English Heritage expects this to grow by 60,000 over the next two to three years.

Tracy Wahdan, operations director for the South East, said a larger, more welcoming centre was needed:

'Dover Castle is one of our flagship sites, second only to Stonehenge in popularity.'

QUESTION & ANSWER

STEVE SALT

Q Can you tell us about your role in the police authority?

A My role is to oversee Kent Police and check it's doing a good job. I'm one of 17 members who regularly meet with the force to ask questions on behalf of the public to senior officers and staff.

I think it's really important that there is a south Kent representative on the police authority – someone to speak on community issues and represent local residents. My main role is to keep a close eye on budgets, look at audits and make sure Kent Police has the right finances in place.

Q Tell us about your background

A I've always enjoyed working with numbers and worked in the banking industry for 35 years. When I retired I decided to join the police authority and within two months I was appointed chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee.

I'm now in my fourth year, but it was a learning curve as the public-sector culture is very different to the private-sector background I came from.

Q What are your views on increasing police council tax?

A It was a hard decision and the authority looked at a range of options, but we did decide on a small increase – 12 pence a week for a typical band D household. But this extra funding will give the public what they want: more police on the streets.

We're actually one of the lowest police authority shires in England and Wales. Now each district will have a dedicated task-team to further reduce crime and antisocial behaviour.

Q Do you think you've achieved anything on behalf of police council taxpayers?

A My role is so important in making sure that the public gets value for money for their policing service.

Q What's the biggest challenge you have to overcome?

A Understanding police finances can be quite daunting. You have to be able to get to grips with complex budgets. We are still laymen holding professionals to account.

I've spent quite a lot of time with my foot in the other camp – being the professional. Now it's round the other way – I'm holding Kent Police to account.

Q How do you relax?

A My biggest passion is travelling and I hope to go to New England this year.

I'm also a huge animal-lover and have three Irish setters, plus lots of cats.

I also really enjoy motorbikes. I took my bike test at 16 and have always loved the acceleration and adrenalin rush. My toy is a Triumph Tiger motorbike that does 0-60mph in just four seconds. Fantastic fun!

Q How would you improve policing?

A I'd like to see the money invested in the force getting real results – Kent Police becoming one of the top 10 performing forces in the country.

I'd also like to see more results from the Kent and Essex Police collaboration project where both forces join up on certain initiatives such as sharing a helicopter or marine services. In the last year alone we saved £3 million as a result.

Q How do you enjoy living in Kent?

A I used to live in the Cotswolds and moved to Kent 18 years ago due to work. As I retired at the age of 50 it's great to be so close to France and I like to pop across when I can.

Experts baffled by speed camera revenue drop-off

BY EMILY HALL

THE number of speeding drivers caught by cameras has dropped by nearly two-thirds in a year, latest figures show.

The surprise drop has baffled road safety experts, but has been put down to a combination of drivers getting used to the cameras and the popularity of sat nav systems.

However, critics say the figures mean nothing if they don't coincide with a reduction in the number of accidents, deaths and injuries.

New statistics show that last year 22,701 drivers were clocked exceeding the speed limit by Gatso cameras and roadside vans – 34,833 fewer than the year before.

"This is a huge drop," said Katherine Barrett of the Kent and Medway Safety Camera Partnership. "We think people are becoming more tolerant of cameras and more aware of where they are."

"We put signs up to warn motorists, have a ten per cent plus 2mph tolerance level and publish all the locations on the website, so there isn't really an excuse."

"Hopefully people are accepting that cameras are now a permanent safety feature on the roads and not there as revenue raisers."

Since the partnership was formed in 2002, 394,189 drivers have been snapped breaking speed limits at 75 fixed camera sites.

The fixed penalty notices handed out last year represent £1.3 million in revenue for the Government – a huge drop on the £3.4m made in 2007.

Speeding peaked in 2004 when 82,906 people were caught, making £5m. Every driver has to pay at least a £60 fine and gets three points on their licence.

Terry Hudson, area organiser for the Association of British Drivers, said: "This looks good on paper but have the rates of accidents, deaths and injuries gone down, too?"

"Cameras have their uses in some places but I don't think they should be used to judge whether somebody is a good or bad driver. It's about speeding in the wrong places."

"Perhaps the reduction in tickets is due to the downturn in the economy and people using cars less. I think drivers are also more aware of the fines they will have to pay if they are caught."

Road safety campaigner Caroline Hobbs, whose eight-year-old daughter Jade and mother Margaret Kuwertz, 79, were killed while trying to cross the A249 at Detling, near Maidstone, in 2000, gave a cautious welcome to the reduction.

"If these figures show cameras are reducing accidents, that's great," she said. "But if it just means a reduction in the number of drivers getting ticketed, then it makes no odds."

"Most people who drive on the A249 are used to the camera being there and slow down, and that could be the case at other sites. And lot of people have sat nav systems now, especially if they do a lot of driving, and they can warn motorists about cameras."

"I'd put this down to people knowing where the cameras are and having better technology to warn them, but even then it's a pretty amazing drop."

The partnership has also just released its latest crash figures, which show the number of people killed or seriously injured has reduced by 63 per cent since 2002.

"There's no getting around it, safety cameras are definitely having an impact on reducing casualties," Ms Barrett said.

Speeding tickets issued in last six years:

July-Dec 2002 – 26,549
2003 – 69,049
2004 – 82,906
2005 – 65,185
2006 – 70,265
2007 – 57,534

CLUBBING TOGETHER

A round of golf raised £2,000 for Pilgrims Hospices after 70 lawyers and staff from Kent firm Boys&Maughan played 27 holes at Prince's Golf Club in Sandwich.

The fund-raiser was topped off by a dinner, charity raffle and auction – as well as an evening of anecdotes from former England pace-bowler Dean Headley.

Pilgrims Hospices provide free palliative care, support for patients, families and their carers at three Kent sites – Thanet, Canterbury and Ashford.

Boys&Maughan partner Peter Rodd said: "Pilgrims Hospices have to raise £8 million each year to keep delivering care to those who need it the most. We are delighted to do our bit in supporting such an excellent cause."

'No water shortage despite heatwave'

DESPITE the recent heatwave and predicted glorious summer, Kent is unlikely to see a hosepipe ban over the coming months.

Environment Agency manager for Kent and East Sussex Andrew Pearce said the county had plenty of water in its reservoirs and groundwater supply because of a wet winter – but we need to save.

He said: "In the South East we have the highest usage of water in the UK," he said. "If we can reduce it by 35 litres a day to 130 litres per person per day, then we can save £1.6 billion in not having to build reservoirs."

Role model Seain's Try Angle triumph

PUPILS from St Edmund's Catholic School performed during the annual Dover and Thanet Try Angle Awards.

Students acted out a scene from Gilbert and Sullivan's The Pirates of Penzance.

Year 13 pupil Dominic Maffia, who took one of the lead roles, received a personal achievement award after being nominated by the head of performing arts and year ten student Seain Way was given the personal development award.

Tutor Christina Hellyar said: "Seain has turned into an excellent mentor and role model. He has learned how to generate positive attention and respect."

"He has been able to use his own experiences to help and support other pupils."

WELL DONE: Seain Way with Mayor of Dover Sue Jones

FRESH START: Some of the students who helped create the new multi-trades workshop at South Kent College, together with tutors and supporters of the successful course

Legions on the march

PUPILS from schools across Kent have been learning about life during Roman times at Dover Museum.

Children from Warden House in Deal were among those taking part in the Roman Festival 2009, where pupils dressed as Romans or Celts and were shown artefacts dating back centuries.

Visitors were given the chance to make mosaics or have their faces made up as Romans or Celtic warriors complete with battle scars.

Prizes were awarded to the best-dressed boy and girl in each class.

A GROUP of students from South Kent College has transformed a derelict building into a dedicated workspace for trade courses.

College governor George Bunting opened the new and improved workshop with a champagne reception and praised team members for their hard work.

Thirteen students were involved in the project, which was part of the multi-trades course at the college. Twelve have now being accepted on to more skilled courses, while one has gone into full-time work.

David Rowe, who led the group, said the multi-trade course was designed for students who didn't get on well at school to give them a fresh start in education.

■ BY MARIJKE COX

"This course used to be in the main workshop, but we did get moved around so we begged or borrowed to do this old place up," he said. "Now we have a dedicated area and the whole course can be delivered here."

"Not only did the students learn valuable practical skills, but they also had to work on literacy and numeracy to pass the course."

Luke Mooring, 17, of Kings Rope Walk in Aycliffe, Dover, said he had really enjoyed the course.

"You can have a laugh but still get the job done," he said. "I've liked everything, but carpentry's what I'm going to study next."

Each student was interviewed before they were taken on by the college and after being accepted worked closely with tutor Patrick McAvoy, who helped them with literacy and numeracy.

He said: "The combination of the course proved very good and we built their confidence as well as straightened people out with regards to behaviour."

Senior managers and tutors praised the group and Mike Stanley, director of construction, said the scheme had brought students back into education: "This is what further education is all about at grass-roots level."

Deputy principal Jackie Watt told the students they should be proud of what they had achieved. She said: "I've watched how this room has been changed over the year and you've done a fantastic job."

WIN Sound Island Festival tickets

KOS MEDIA is pleased to offer you the opportunity to win tickets to the Sound Island Festival at Quex Park in Birchington on Saturday, July 25, and to meet the Pussycat Dolls or JLS.

The concert is one of two over the same weekend with a full list of artist appearing with the Pussycat Dolls.

The first of the special guests is N-DUBZ who has only recently been replaced following a month at the top of the singles charts with Trinchy Stryder. They are joined by JLS who are already causing quite a sensation. Other artists announced are Steve Appleton, Fe-Nix, The Score and City Girls.

All this to build up the atmosphere before superstar girl band The Pussycat Dolls launch their own very special presentation ## and meet the Pussycat Dolls or JLS backstage, too

– a frenetic 90-minute combination of hits, dance routines and micro costumes which are, without doubt, greatly influenced by their burlesque roots.

I Don't Need a Man is for obvious reasons, always going to be a show favourite. But the highlight has to be Bottle Pop – the naughty bits highlighted word for word by a vociferous audience. With the clever money going on the encores being Don't Cha, mixed up with Show Me Love and When I Grow Up. With a finale like that it promises to be one of the best endings to a concert at Quex Park, and the best feel good tonic ever devised!

You can be there too, and have the opportunity to meet the Pussycat Dolls or JLS, courtesy of KOS Media, as we have two pairs of tickets to be won to see the concert and to meet one of the bands backstage. Just answer this simple question:

What country are the Pussycat Dolls from? a. USA or b. UK

To enter, simply answer the question below and send your entry on a postcard along with your email address (if applicable), name, address, and daytime telephone number to Pussycat dolls/JLS Competition, KOS Media, Apple Barn, Smeeth, Ashford, Kent, TN25 6SR. You can also text your answer to 81800, by sending DOLLS, followed by a space, the answer, a space and your name and address.

Messages cost 25p plus standard network charges. The service is provided by g8wave London N7. or email your answer to competitions@kosmedia.co.uk.

The closing date is Monday, July 20, 2009. Please mark on your entry which band you would like to meet.

No purchase necessary. For full terms and conditions see www.kentnews.co.uk, or call 01303 817073.

If you do not wish to receive any literature please write 'no literature' on your entry.

For more details see www.cozwecan.biz. Tickets are £32.50 from Margate Winter Gardens 01843 292795 or www.gigantic.com.

A visit to the JobCentre prompted this week's writer to ponder the failure of some to integrate

If you won't embrace British culture, why are you here?

IS it just me, or are other people worried about the problems caused by membership of this wretched European Economic Community?

I recently accompanied my son to the Jobcentre as, despite having a degree, he is unable to find a job. As the clock ticked half-an-hour past our appointment time, I picked up some literature which was lying around on a nearby, cracked table.

In it, I noticed further copies of that leaflet on how to claim benefits; it was available in 26 other languages and, if you did not speak one of those, translations were available whatever your language!

In other words, immigrants who are not even able to speak English have the Department for Work and Pensions bending over backwards to help them claim unemployment benefits that you, I and other taxpayers fund. "But there aren't that many non-English-speaking unemployed anyway," you might say. You are probably right. Most of them seem to be employed in front-line 'customer-service' positions by councils, banks and other institutions in an attempt to make it as difficult as possible for us to complain about anything.

I read the newspapers and note with interest the application of the racial equality laws in this country. I smile when I hear about incidents which the police would usually do nothing about suddenly being taken extremely seriously if one of those involved plays the race card.

Local immigrant associations claim their members are singled out for abuse. Why are they so surprised? Their members choose to live in groups, wear different clothes, follow different religions, eat different foods and many can't even speak English.

They set themselves up as apart from everyone else in this country and then complain they are treated differently. Whose fault is that?

What finally prompted me to write this rant has been the proliferation of 'UK border patrol' programmes on TV.

On these shows, on the rare occasions when officials catch would-be illegal immigrants trying to get in or who are already in the country (and often working, taking the job my son so desperately needs), they simply take their details and let them out on bail.

I would love to know how many known illegals have been caught, arrested and released to go at large again in the UK.

And if you think me a racist thug for my views and blame me and 'others' like me for the recent successes of the BNP, you should know that I am black – that is black, not 'ethnically challenged' or of a 'coloured persuasion' or any other of that politically correct rubbish.

I was born in India and emigrated to the UK many years ago. I consider myself British, as reflected in my speech, my integration with my community, my willingness to obey English laws and, in all ways, to act British, not set myself apart.

TALK TIME

NICK KINSELLA

Nick Kinsella, head of the UK Human Trafficking Centre, talks about his work and the victims involved

What is the main trafficking reason?

Sexual exploitation is the main reason. Official UN figures say about 80 per cent of people who are trafficked are women and children – but there are several other reasons such as benefit fraud where children are passed from family to family so they can claim. They are also trafficked to be used for street crime or domestic servitude.

How does a trafficking network operate?

There is no typical network, and that's what can make it difficult. Some trafficking is carried out by highly organised international criminal gangs who run the process from beginning to end, from the initial contact to the exploitation itself. We have also come across much smaller, more informal, gangs who are only involved in part of the chain. So a gang in Bulgaria might pass victims on to another group. The bottom line with trafficking is that it's all about money. Traffickers trade people for money just like drugs, counterfeit money or guns. It is a modern-day slave trade.

How are you combating the trade?

The UKHTC includes dozens of organisations, including the police, the serious crime investigation team, social services and the Crown Prosecution Service.

It is not an immigration issue; 25 per cent of victims are EU nationals – they are entitled to be here, they are just being exploited. This is often what makes it so difficult to spot at border controls. Most of the victims who come in do so legally. When they are stopped they are relaxed and happy because they think they are here to start a better life where they can support themselves and their families.

YOUR LETTERS

No conservation with these Tories

Shepway Conservatives' terrible reputation when it comes to preserving our local history and culture has taken a further step into the abyss.

No one could be blamed for thinking a perfectly good 1920s house, in character with its neighbouring properties and situated within a conservation area, would be under no threat from an application for demolition and replacement.

Certainly not from a planning application for an alternative glass and stainless-steel modern design.

But that is what has happened to Sandgate's western coastal strip, set within a conservation area, when Shepway's Conservatives approved it at a planning meeting.

Nothing wrong with the proposed new design per se, but it does nothing to 'protect' and 'enhance' the conservation area that any application 'must' demonstrate in planning law for a granting of permission.

While Shepway's Conservatives remain in charge, please don't think our conservation areas remain safe – far from it!

Neil Matthews
Folkstone and Hythe Liberal Democrats

Decision is the pits

The committee and members of Friends of Lydd Airport Group are deeply disappointed that Shepway council has chosen to accept the advice of Natural England, which opposes the redevelopment of our airport, in preference to the Environment Agency, which supports it.

We believe this to be a convenient cop-out by Shepway, which has ulterior motives.

Natural England changed its name six years ago, for no apparent reason, at a cost of £2.2 million to the taxpayers.

We believe that Natural England has actively supported gravel extraction on the Marsh, which has created deep, dangerous gravel pits in which people have drowned.

The destruction of rare plants, fauna and the natural habitat of the indigenous wildlife by gravel extraction is obviously of no concern to this organisation.

The creation of habitat for non-indigenous wildlife, to the detriment of people, is the priority – incredible!

Natural England did nothing to support Lydd Town Council and Shepway council in dealing with a group of people who violated an SSSI adjoining the airfield by setting up a motorcycle track – without planning permission. This track is still there.

Natural England advocated a 'managed retreat' policy at Jurys Gap which would have had catastrophic consequences for the entire Marsh. Happily the Environment Agency's policy of 'hold the line', with the support of the Ministry of Defence, prevailed – sanity prevailed.

It is time for Shepway council and Natural England to come clean on this issue. The council owns the airfield site. The site sits on a huge deposit of gravel and sand – a gift from the sea.

Cash-strapped Shepway council would make millions from the aggregate companies. Natural England would revel in a new play area and the Marsh would be left with an enormous gravel pit all the way to Greatstone, with its consequences.

Michael Walsh (FLAG)
Lydd

Airport not needed

Contrary to the view of last week's letter-writer, Lydd airport is environmentally damaging. This is because it contributes to the rise in greenhouse gas emissions from aviation.

This rise, about 6 per cent a year across Europe, means that savings made in other areas run the risk of being nullified by increases in aviation emissions. From 1990-2004, global aviation emissions rose 34 per cent.

The estimate for the total rise from 1990-2012 is a staggering 150 per cent.

While this may be reduced as a result of the recession, it shows the importance of reducing aviation emissions.

In short, regional airports like Manston and Lydd should be put to other uses as part of a strategy to reduce emissions.

Kent Green Party advocates all-weather leisure centres for these locations to maintain and expand local employment, and to take advantage of the growth in domestic tourism.

Steve Dawe
Kent Green Party

Thank you to pub

I would just like to send my thanks to the staff and patrons of The Cinque Port Arms who so kindly gave me a lift on their float at Dover Carnival on Saturday, July 4.

Despite injuring my ankle, I was determined to take part in the parade – even if it meant hobbling along on crutches – as I had promised the chairman of Dover Carnival Association Ltd, Mandie Sehmbi, that I would take part.

However, the Cinque Port Arms heard of my plight and offered me a lift on its Venetian float.

Thanks everyone, I had a great time during the parade and I will take part in the Publicans' Walk with you, as promised, as long as my ankle is better.

Karol Steele
Dover

Lifting my hopes

After hearing the sad news that the Folkestone chair lift was closing, it was a breath of fresh air to read last week's report about the positive ideas of Michael Stainer from The Grand.

He proposes to save the lift and develop the existing lift house into facilities to support a park-and-ride scheme, with the possibility of also constructing a new pier. What a boost this would be to the harbour area.

Let us hope Shepway council can find the imagination to support this scheme to enhance the existing assets of the town to the benefit of tourism.

This would make a pleasant change from the usual development plans, which allow them to demolish our old buildings and replace them with contemporary architecture admired by the few and despised by the many.

Captain Sensible?

A Folkestone paper ran an article on August 19, 2004, in regard to the removal of the link span.

In this it was implied that the roll-on, roll-off ferry terminal at Folkestone harbour built in 1971-2 was built to last only about eight years – “so it would appear to me (Alan Taylor) that the link span that was removed was well past its sell-by date”.

We were updated by Roger De Haan's Folkestone Harbour Company Limited news statement of January 17, 2005, that there were plans to extensively regenerate the port. These included a harbour dredging programme and refurbishment of existing berths.

In the year before the Sealink ports, harbours, ships, routes and services fell into the hands of James Sherwood's Sea Containers.

In 1983 2,119,653 passengers used the Folkestone-Boulogne services.

The latest craft on the cross-Channel scene, the Norman Arrow, draws in less draft than MV Hengist & MV Horsa and is also slightly smaller in length than the much-loved vessels.

The LD Lines Norman Arrow is currently running out of the Port of Dover instead of from Folkestone.

If the harbour is allowed to be regenerated for the return of the Folkestone-Boulogne cross-Channel car ferry services, then the economy of the harbour town of Folkestone, which runs hand by hand with the harbour, will be regenerated.

As for the Folkestone harbour railway branch line, instead of closing, it could bring back sea-rail traffic and classic passengers that Dover port cannot accommodate – even perhaps the famous VSOE trains could return to the port of Folkestone.

Shepway council's Local Development Framework Core Strategy to 2026 'consultation' is due to be finished on July 24.

Carrying out a search for words such as port, harbour, ships, ferries and railway in the council's latest consultation document on the Local Plan produces nothing – it is as if Folkestone being a cross-Channel ferry port has been wiped out of the council's memory.

The time is now for only sensible people to talk sensibly about sensible craft and sensible services.

Be a good sport and add some danger

Regarding the correspondence in these letters pagea about the merits or otherwise of tennis as opposed to other sports, I would like to add my thoughts.

As it is a non-physical contact sport and one in which the only risk of injury is a sprained ankle, I feel it should be categorised as a game rather than a sport.

Sports should have some sort of risk involved – whether it be physical contact such as is a part of football, rugby or hockey, or the dangers of fast bowling in cricket.

Other activities which should be classified as sports are athletics, swimming and combats such as boxing and judo. I feel games should encompass things such as tennis, along with badminton and bowls.

Moral compass is way off the mark

Surely if the phrase 'political correctness gone mad' can ever be applied, it is the decision of a police force to give compasses to Muslim prisoners so that they can pray correctly towards Mecca.

Why not give them a file, clothes and false papers to go with it?

Ian Paynter

We should be happy to see the visitors

With summer comes the influx of young foreign visitors – a thing not often praised by Kentish residents.

So I am calling on people when they see a crocodile of children eating sweets and speaking in a foreign tongue to not complain but thank them for helping our economy.

ON GENERAL RELEASE

BRUNO (18)

Sacha Baron Cohen adopts the role of gay, crass, insolent fashionista Bruno from Austria, who tours the US looking to set up unsuspecting locals with his outrageous brand of 'interviewing'.

Robin blossoms when she steps in Pippa's clothes

■ BY LISA WILLIAMS

I'VE been talking to Robin Wright Penn for ten minutes and she's already slipped into an English accent three times.

We're in Edinburgh, where she is promoting her latest film The Private Lives Of Pippa Lee and on the first two occasions I assume she's putting it on for comic effect.

On the third, I can't help but point these moments of received pronunciation and she looks startled.

"I know," the 43-year-old says confessionally. "It's because when I'm around you people I feel just like I have to speak like this because I hate my accent. I feel very American around you guys."

She starts making a whining sound and adds: "That's what I sound like to myself when I'm around you."

Robin's father is English so she had a head-start with the accent and the California-based actress admits that – after putting on her costume – adopting another accent helps her get into character.

"Clothing is so important to me when finding a character. It changes your walk, the way you hold your arms, the way you sit: it's maybe the most important thing. Of course, if you have an accent, that's even better."

In her title role as Pippa Lee, a 50-year-old woman heading for a mental breakdown after moving to a retirement village with her older husband, Robin didn't have to feign an accent. But her clothes, she says, were instrumental in getting herself into the prim and proper role.

Given starched beige trousers and plain blouses, her on-screen wardrobe is eye-catching in its plainness.

ROBIN'S LIVES: Robin Wright Penn with husband Sean

"It was genius picking those very conservative, wardrobe pieces for me, and the curl in the hair aged me, too."

Although close to her character in age, the almost-50 actress says the clothes really helped her get into the part.

"I really felt her, every day, because I wear this," she says, pointing at her skinny jeans and tailored leather jacket. "Always have."

In the film, Pippa has an affair with her friend's son, played by Keanu Reeves, who rescues her from her troubled past and the suburban drudgery in which she ends up living.

Pitched to movie audiences as an age-gap relationship film, in real life Keanu is actually a year older than Robin.

She admits that kissing him on set wasn't strange, because of the on-screen chemistry.

"He was so perfect for it. I feel like we were blessed to have him do it, because it didn't feel strange. The dynamic was already there. To me, that's chemical," she says, her voice inflecting upwards as if asking a question.

"When a director knows, when they walk in, that that person clicks, and we just had it," she continues.

"We needed Pippa to be seen and he's the first person that actually sees her for who she is. It's beautiful as it's like she's then set free, allowed to blossom."

Quality treatments in 'boutique chic' salon

■ The White House, Deal

THE White House in Deal offers a different experience to most health and beauty salons.

In order for clients to feel truly relaxed and refreshed all the necessary treatments are available under one roof.

All staff are highly trained in their respective therapies and undergo constant refresher courses.

The White House provides hair styling, massage, manicures, pedicures, body wraps, stone massage, chiropody, podiatry and waxings.

Pevonia Botanica – made from natural sources and world renowned for its quality – is used for all spa body treatments.

The salon is also one of the few in the county to use Davines hair products from Italy.

These provide many different types of treatment to improve the quality of clients hair and address the scalp and roots to ensure long-lasting effects.

The whole building makes customers relaxed and is an ideal space for them to be pampered, with informal décor based around a boutique chic spa salon.

Every month special treatments are made available so customers can try something new every time they walk through the door.

All products are carefully chosen for their environmentally friendly nature in order for the salon to help promote a positive impact on the planet – currently very important as a customer choice.

There are also a number of “experiences” aimed at Mother's Day, Proms and New Year detoxes.

Tim Flanagan took over the business in March 2008 and relaunched it as the White House a year ago.

Since then it has gone from strength to strength with special offers each month such as July's discounted Tropical Body Wraps.

Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays are discount days for students and OAPs who all receive 10 per cent off services.

Opening hours are Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 9am to 5pm, Wednesdays 9am to 5.30pm and Fridays 9am to 8pm.

Kent shows off its best

Royal visitors to give seal of approval as county's farmers and producers prepare for the highlight of their year

KENT COUNTY SHOW

Friday to Sunday, July 17-19
Kent Showground, Detling

ROYAL visitors will be taking part in the Kent County Show's 80th celebration.

On Friday, the Earl and Countess of Wessex are due to be attending the Kent County Agricultural Society's show to meet many of the county's farmers, growers and food producers.

They will also see the Young Farmers display, which will feature more than 400 young people showing their cattle, sheep, pigs and small pets during the three-day event.

The Royal couple have also been asked to present long service awards to agricultural workers.

The visit will provide an exciting start to the show, which has a vast array of attractions to interest all the family. After an absence of many years, the King's Troop Royal Horse Artillery will be treating spectators to an outstanding display twice daily in the main Astor Ring. Marvel at the skill and discipline of the horses and their riders as they demonstrate how to manoeuvre guns, pick up pegs with a lance, handle swords and fire a revolver from a galloping horse.

On Friday, the Coakham Bloodhounds will be in action in the Astor and Falmouth Rings, while a display illustrating 80 years of agricultural machinery takes place in the Falmouth Ring every day.

Animal magic

On all three days, the police dog demonstration will shed light on the important work of canine officers. There will be more animal magic from the twice-daily bird of prey flying demonstrations by The Hawking Centre, as well as ferret and terrier racing in the Countryside Area and the Warrenby Gun Dogs.

Learn about farming with the educational live stage show about sheep and wool, while the Sheep, Dog and Duck Display will be entertaining for all the family.

Dogs are put through their paces in the flyball races and there will be more excitement with the Ken Fox Wall of Death.

Young riders tackle tough obstacles in the display by the Kent Youth Trials Club, and visitors can meet Titan the Robot, a humanoid entertainment robot.

A display in the Kent Pavilion, Remembering Kent: An 80-Year Journey, explores the collaborations between the showground and many of the county's organisations. The EcoVillage returns and there will also be an exhibition by the National Association of Flower Arrangement Societies.

The show runs from 8am to 6pm each day. Tickets cost £17/£12 for adults, £7.50 for children and £43 for families.

There will be lots of colour to see outside as well, as the gardens are at their peak and it is the perfect time to explore.

Visitors have the chance to buy roses grown there and even enjoy a game of croquet on the lawn.

Walmer Castle and Gardens are open daily throughout the summer. For more information, phone 0870 333 1183 or visit www.english-heritage.org.uk.

YOUR TV REVIEW

■ BY GARETH DORRIAN

PSYCHOVILLE
BBC2, 10pm, Friday

IN a week of bizarre news – which saw mourners wave a white-gloved goodbye to the king of pop and a man drowned in a vat of chocolate – Psychoville seems genteel in comparison.

The fourth instalment of this serial killer panto was most notable for one extraordinary thing.

It wasn't the usual queasy blend of Hammer horror schlock and dark humour that was unusual.

Anyone familiar with its creators – the men behind BBC2's equally disturbing League of Gentlemen – will be well used to that.

What was incredible was how technically perfect this episode seemed, done as it was in one long unflinching and brutally involving shot.

For the unaware, Psychoville tells the macabre tale of a freakish assortment of murderous characters all over the country who are being blackmailed by a shadowy raincoated and glove-wearing bloke.

Its cast includes a blind toy-obsessed loner, a porn movie panto dwarf, a one-handed clown and a nurse who thinks her baby doll is alive.

The previous three episodes paraded the oddball cast in a series of cringe-inducing, bloodthirsty and lurid scenarios – that were often brutal, slickly edited and occasionally hilarious.

A link between all of them has been hinted at and it appeared we were headed towards a formulaic ending, tying up the loose ends.

But on Thursday last week, the show took an unexpected detour into an apparently traditional BBC format – the television play.

For 30 minutes, Psychoville's two most disturbing stars – mum-and-son team David and Maureen Sowerbutts

FUN'S OVER: BBC2's Psychoville was created by the team behind The League of Gentlemen

(Steve Pemberton and Reece Shearsmith) – took centre stage.

David and Maureen are so decidedly creepy, they could easily be the two most disturbing television characters ever imagined.

Their incestuous exchanges are thrown into shocking focus by his encyclopaedic knowledge of mass murderers and her homely homicidal tendencies.

Psychoville is not an easily-forgotten monsters ball. Aside from the gruesome violence, there are some wicked one-liners. To describe it simply as black comedy is an understatement that ranks alongside "that Jacko could dance a bit".

The single-shot experiment worked a treat – and highlighted the flawless timing and talent of Pemberton and Shearsmith. Their interaction is simply frightening to recall.

YOUR WEEK'S HOROSCOPE BY RUSSELL GRANT

AQUARIUS (Jan 21-Feb 19)

YOU exude animal magnetism, getting admiring glances wherever you go. Of course, amour could be the last thing on your mind right now. It seems as though creative pursuits are taking up most of your attention. You could discover a talent for one of the performing arts.

TAURUS (Apr 21-May 21)

EARNING more money has become your top priority. You hate venturing out of your comfort zone, but it's becoming more and more apparent you need to do so in order to increase your earnings. If this means trying your hand in a different industry, so be it.

LEO (Jul 24-Aug 23)

SPENDING more time with friends helps ease any tension that's been building. Recently, demands have kept you cut off from your nearest and dearest. This is a difficult situation for you. By scaling back your work schedule, you'll be back to your happy, spontaneous self in no time.

SCORPIO (Oct 24-Nov 22)

YOUR pulling power is at an all-time high this week. Twisting someone around your little finger will be easy. It really isn't fair to play with their affections when you are so irresistible, but nobody can accuse you of being a saint and a little bit of what you fancy will do you good.

PISCES (Feb 20-Mar 20)

TRUST your feelings this week, especially as far as men are concerned. A relative or colleague thinks that you're a threat. If he tries to bully you into going against your interests, put your foot down. If you're house hunting, go ahead and haggle for the best price available.

GEMINI (May 22-Jun 22)

GETTING in shape will not only make you look better, it will also lift your spirits. Pretty soon, you'll renew your interest in people and activities that used to give you pleasure. Don't worry what others will think of your new routine. When it comes to fitness, do it for yourself.

VIRGO (Aug 24-Sep 23)

PEOPLE are looking to you for leadership, so don't be shy about asserting yourself. You need to be exacting with colleagues who have a tendency to slack off. Granted, your high expectations won't make you very popular, but it will yield impressive results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23-Dec 21)

IT'S time to even the score with a best friend, business partner or lover. Lately they have been riding roughshod over you. Stand up for yourself and they'll stop taking you for granted. If someone special has caught your eye you'll have to make the first move.

ARIES (Mar 21-Apr 20)

YOU'RE even more restless than usual and very tired of the same old routines. If you're dating you may be tempted ditch them and find someone sexier, but be careful you could let a perfectly good relationship slip through your fingers and end up regretting your skittishness.

CANCER (Jun 23-Jul 23)

A SURGE of creative energy prompts you to take time out to work alone on a pet project. You get more satisfaction from writing, painting, and music than you do from work or family. Naturally some may feel alienated by your behaviour, but that can't be helped.

• To find out more about what the stars have in store call Russell on Cancer 09067-531755

LIBRA (Sep 24-Oct 23)

GIVING yourself over to a spiritual pursuit could be fulfilling. You're tired of always having to think in material terms. Reading will be illuminating and so will attending religious services. In the end, you don't have to commit to anything; just keep an open mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 20)

TAKE an objective attitude toward work. If you're given responsibilities that are beneath your ability, do them anyway. Your employer is too short staffed to tolerate temper tantrums. Besides, if you put in a good performance now, you may be promoted when times get better.

developing confidence and individual talents

Frustrated to know that your child could succeed but is making slow progress?

Is it because of going unnoticed in a large school or a large class size?

Is your child lacking the confidence to flourish?

At Dover College, we are as keen as any other school to cater for the most able pupils and do it well. However, our recent inspection highlighted our great ability as a school to enable our more average pupils to achieve far better than their potential suggested on entry. By offering boys and girls timely affirmation and appropriate challenges in a caring environment, many of them surprise their parents and, more importantly, themselves with their achievements.

Pupils can join Dover College at any time of the year if there is a place available.

New: Pre-reception class for 3 year olds

Top DJs get Tunnel Vision as fort hosts house night

■ BY SIMON ROBINSON

THE Napoleonic Fort Horsted will be brought into the 21st century next month during a one-off night of house, techno and dubstep.

The historic monument, built in 1880, will host Smirnoff's Tunnel Vision night on Saturday, August 1.

Headliners include Maidstone-born DJ Jim Rivers and David E Sugar, who has recently toured with the likes of overnight sensations La Roux, Calvin Harris and Klaxons.

Jim, whose DJing talents have taken him across the US, Australia and Europe, said he was looking forward to his homecoming gig.

He said: "Although I was born in Maidstone, I've been living in Bristol for the last few years and have been touring around the world, so it's good to come back to Kent and stake my claim again."

"I'm looking forward to the event – the venue looks really good. I can't say I've ever DJed in a Napoleonic fort before!"

"I'll be playing a mixture – everything from deep house to techno and everything in between. I really want to get people going."

A Tunnel Vision spokesman said: "The fort will play host to one of the most unique events – a day/nighter of epic proportions."

"Visitors will walk over the drawbridge and through the gatehouse into a venue presenting the finest visuals, lightshows and sound-systems, while the best new DJs play house, techno, dubstep and break across two rooms."

"Upon entering the grounds, visitors will be transported back in time with Napoleonic military re-enactments, hog roasts and an abundance of historic shenanigans."

Joining Jim in the Tunnel room will be fellow house and techno DJs Dodek, Mode: Repeat, Lee Brinx, Alex K, Tom Jobson and Deano Loco.

The Other Room boasts the likes of Dycey, J-Varn, Small Fry, Jay Kenzo and Big Trouble. Adam French and Anthony Froom will also provide sunset beats on the Sunshine Terrace.

A limited number of saver tickets are available at £12, with the standard entry set at £15. Tickets are available from www.clubtickets.com and by phoning 0870 2462050.

Tunnel Vision is operating a bus service from the River Bar in Maidstone. It will leave at 5pm and return at 3am.

Fort Horsted is in Primrose Close, Chatham. For details, visit www.residentadvisor.net/tunnelvision.

Rural escape is fun for the family

BY JEREMY GATES

TAKING care to dodge the cyclists, I moved to the edge of the rutted chalk footpath to take in the view from Britain's next national park – and saw a panorama to compare with the Alps.

To the north, beyond the plain of the Weald, was the ridge my National Trust notes identified as the Hog's Back. "Blunt bow-headed, whale-backed downs" is how Rudyard Kipling described a similar scene.

Below me, the village of South Harting was nestled around its medieval church spire, the fields occasionally patterned by sunlight bursting between clouds.

Gloomsters agonise about the fate of the South Downs when it becomes Britain's 15th National Park in 2010. But in the sleepy rural lanes of West Sussex, southwards from Crawley through the Arun Valley to the coast, only a vivid imagination would worry about this special place getting too crowded.

The town of Arundel, for example, is such a historic gem that you would expect it to be swamped already.

Is the castle worth it for visitors paying £15 per head? Probably, because you get so many bangs for your bucks: walled gardens, augmented by the spectacular Earl Collector's Garden opened last summer; the keep and its ancient battlements, voice-overs re-enacting a Civil War siege; and then the house itself, largely rebuilt in the late-19th Century and family home for generations of the Howards, one England's great Catholic families.

Beyond the castle are the sort of attractions that would enable a family to holiday happily

LIVING HISTORY: Spectacular Arundel Castle offers visitors an array of activities for a fun-packed day out around Arundel this summer for a week.

At Swanborough Lake, where families go boating beneath cliffs covered in trees and bushes, the setting is so perfect that Sir Winston Churchill tried to paint it when he stayed at the castle.

Nearby, the 65-acre Wildfowl and Wetlands Centre, part of the famous charity based at Slimbridge, offers challenges galore with an 'eco' theme: sunrise safaris; evening bat walks; silent, electric boat rides; summer pond-dipping and bug-hunting; collections of rare species of wildfowls; and play areas with two new giant bird feeders large enough for children to climb inside.

A couple of miles away was our base to explore this delightful corner of West Sussex: the remarkable Bailiffscourt Hotel, one of few country-house hotels with the sea at the bottom of the garden – the English Channel on the shingle of Climping Beach.

With mellow stone walls beneath a massive thatched roof, Bailiffscourt would appear to be a centuries-old Cotswold house. In fact, this splendid architectural fake was created by the Guinness family in the 1930s, and has become the sort of place where couples go for a quiet, luxurious stay to remember.

Forget all that waffle about Wi-Fi – our room had a huge four-poster bed, an open fireplace, already laid with paper and kindling, and a basket of logs to be tossed on the flames whenever we felt a tad chilly.

Next morning, before breakfast, the ultimate luxury: a choice between a visit to the health club with both indoor and outdoor pools, or an easy stroll down to the beach to share the rising dawn with the wave-skimming seagulls.

Offset mortgages can work saving wonders

OFFSET mortgages can be attractive for borrowers with spare cash they want to hang on to but that is not earning much interest because of low interest rates.

This type of mortgage allows homeowners to use their savings to reduce loan costs while keeping access to their money – and to earn an interest rate of 4.6 per cent.

They work because those who use them as well as taking out a mortgage have a separate savings account with the bank that has lent the mortgage.

Instead of receiving interest, these linked accounts reduce the interest paid on the mortgage.

The account balance is subtracted from the mortgage debt, with loan interest only charged on the net difference.

According to First Direct, the average homeowner earns 4.6 per cent on savings linked to these mortgages.

However, offset loan rates can be higher than those on other mortgages.

Offsets make most sense for borrowers with significant savings, particularly higher-rate taxpayers who would otherwise lose 40 per cent of their interest in taxable accounts.

Company tackles site shunned by builders

REGENERATION specialist the Brownfield Land Assembly Company has bought the old Bede and Dunstan Homes in College Road, Deal, and plans to build 16 new affordable homes.

The five two-bedroom houses and 11 three-bedroom houses will be built to Level 3 of the Government's Code for Sustainable Homes and will be among the greenest in the area.

BLAC is funded by the Government's Homes and Communities Agency and has been established by Hyde Housing Association Limited, RJ Barwick Limited and South East England Development Agency to tackle the shortage of housing in the South East.

It is funded specifically to identify, acquire and make useable difficult development sites. The College Road site had not attracted commercial interest due to the presence of asbestos, demolition costs and flood-risk issues.

BLAC is now working with Dover District Council and the Environment Agency to prepare the half-acre site for construction. Subject to planning permission, it is hoped construction will begin towards the end of the year.

Prepay charges that punish county's poor

■ BY NICK AMES

ENERGY firms operating in the county may be in breach of EU rules by overcharging thousands of our poorest households.

The warning comes from the National Housing Federation as energy regulator Ofgem has been accused of failing hard-up families.

It comes after it emerged that several energy firms were allowed to overcharge prepay meter customers by £464 million over a three-year period.

While they are allowed to charge higher prices to prepay customers to cover meter installation and maintenance costs, those charges need to be 'cost-reflective', otherwise suppliers risk being in breach of EU directives.

Between 2006-08, millions of prepay meter customers were charged well in excess of the average extra cost for installing and maintaining both gas and electricity prepay meters, estimated by Ofgem as being £87 over direct debit tariffs.

According to official figures, npower, British Gas, E.ON, SSE and Scottish Power all charged prepay customers more than the average cost of supplying meters – even though households with prepay meters only have an average income of £16,000.

Many prepay meter users in the region are classed as vulnerable customers such as single-parent families.

Even though they pay for their fuel up front, the big energy firms have frequently charged them more in recent years than any other customer group.

Ofgem is to finish consulting on the new regulations that it hopes will stop energy firms from charging prepay customers more for their gas and electricity than the figure justified by the extra cost to the supplier of providing a meter. The watchdog said the aim of the changes to the regulations was to "better reflect the EU directives and to address the detriment caused to consumers".

Simon Nunn, southern head for the National Housing Federation, said: "It is an absolute disgrace that those who are least able to afford it are being penalised because of the way they pay their bills."

"Unscrupulous energy firms have been overcharging vulnerable people for years and Ofgem now needs to act to defend the rights of ordinary people rather than protecting the profits of big business."

"Some companies, including npower, E.ON and Scottish Power, have already proved that energy firms can absorb the additional costs rather than passing them on to their poorest customers, and Ofgem must outlaw the practice of discriminating against prepay meter users once and for all."

Welcome home for the Forces

HOME TO ROOST: Celebrations at the first Armed Forces Day look set to continue as Ward Homes offers military personnel a financial incentive to get on the property ladder

THE county's military servicemen and women are being offered incentives to help them get their feet on the property ladder.

People employed by the Army, Royal Navy or Royal Air Force, as well as anyone who served in the wars in Afghanistan or Iraq, all qualify for an Armed Forces Discount Scheme from Kent housebuilder Ward Homes.

The scheme is available at Eden Village in Sittingbourne, Priory Meadows on Sheppey, The Woodlands in Boughton Monchelsea and its latest development, Pavilion Place in Snodland, which was launched this month.

Anyone set to retire from the Armed Forces this year will be eligible until the end of 2009. They will be offered a £500 discount for every £25,000 or part thereof on the cost of the property they are buying.

For example, on a home costing £126,000 they would qualify for a reduction of £3,000.

The move has been brought in to coincide with Armed Forces Day.

"This country rightly celebrates the achievements of its Armed Forces, which many regard as the best in the world," said Tim Nabbs, sales director for Ward Homes.

"We have an established track record of helping people into home ownership and this offer should enable servicemen and women to finally own their own homes and save money."

"What gives us the edge over other people selling homes is that we provide customers with innovative financial incentives which enable them to get a mortgage."

Homes available for the Armed Forces Discount Scheme at Eden Village include two-, three- and four-bedroom houses, priced from £146,950.

Two-bedroom houses are available for sale at Priory Meadows from £139,950.

Three-bedroom houses are available at The Woodlands, with prices starting at £224,950.

Pavilion Place, a development of 44 homes, has also been launched.

Homes available for the Armed Forces Discount Scheme at Pavilion Place include two-, three- and four-bedroom houses, with prices starting at £199,950.

MOTORS NEWS

New Jaguar XJ wows celebrities at launch

JAGUAR flew in American chat show star and car fan Jay Leno to launch its new XJ flagship to a celebrity audience in London.

It underlined how crucial this new stunner is to the British executive marque, especially as it breaks a styling tradition begun in the 1960s by the Mark X and refined by the original XJ6.

A square grille remains, but twin headlights have gone, replaced by sweeping slits fronting a slippery four-door aluminium coupé body. It arrives in early 2010 priced from £52,500.

New Mini celebrates making 1.5m milestone

JUST weeks after marking 50 years of the original Mini, BMW's Oxford plant reached another milestone by producing the 1.5 millionth 'new Mini' since its launch in 2001.

Inspired by and emulating the 60s icon, the new generation series has been a UK export success, sold in more than 80 countries and an all-electric Mini E also goes on trial in the UK soon with government support. Some 5.3 million 'classic' Minis (1959-2000) were built, taking the combined Mini count to 6.8m.

Kangoo II proves that it's no 'van ordinaire'

JUST as Britain's recession-hit drivers shun glitz and glamour, French carmakers have boosted the appeal of utility MPVs like the Renault Kangoo.

The second generation Kangoo is no longer disadvantaged in consumers' eyes by being van-based; the more expensive Renault Scenic was the donor this time, yet Kangoo prices begin at a recession busting £11,200 for a more capacious car with the same rear sliding doors layout to tempt a variety of buyers needing a weekday van/weekend family holdall.

A WORK OF ART: Citroën's seven-seat Grand Picasso has plenty of stowage, with big lidded bins on the dashboard, and can be driven in fully automatic mode or as a manual

Picasso hangs up well in the Citroën MPV gallery

PABLO Picasso was a master of the unorthodox and it is not hard to see why Citroën 'signed' its MPV sub-brand after the Spanish artist.

The seven-seat C4 Grand Picasso (from £14,995) certainly fits the gallery with its dramatic lines and interior flexibility.

The cabin seems huge even without the £610 full-length panoramic roof and there is plenty of stowage, with big lidded bins on a dashboard that mixes pragmatic layout with flair.

Comfortable seats complement good ride quality and refinement and the middle three adjust quickly and separately and flip/slide simply for access to the rearmost pair, though using these leaves minimal boot space.

I would normally recommend buying a diesel MPV for economy and low-down grunt to cope with possible heavy loads, even though you must cover more miles to recover higher upfront costs.

So I was dubious about the 1.6-litre petrol test car with Citroën's EGS semi-auto gearbox, loaned by Wilmoths, Maidstone.

Doubts dispersed quickly though; the lively

150bhp motor takes the Grand Picasso to 62mph in 10.2 seconds. And the six-speed EGS can also be driven in fully automatic mode or as a clutchless manual using a sequential lever or paddle shifts either side of the stationary steering wheel hub – now a Citroën trademark.

Wilmoths, Maidstone general sales manager Kelvin Clayton, said: "Even I didn't like the sound of this combination at first, but the 1.6 engine has plenty of go and the gearbox learns your style of driving."

"The proof of the pudding is that most people who try the EGS gearbox, end up buying one and we have had just one complaint."

Amazingly, the EGS can memorise up to four regular drivers; once it has your 'number' it recognises who has slipped behind the wheel and adopts the correct mode.

And while it cannot match a diesel fuel saving, this cheaper petrol auto combination offers greater economy than a conventional manual, as well as low emissions to make it a reasonably 'green' option.

Our mid-range VTR+ model is priced at £19,855, but Wilmoths currently has a £1,500 Grand Picasso discount promotion plus zero per cent finance.

BE A 'PROPERTY PROFESSIONAL'

Regardless of the recession, a new European Directive now legally requires an estimated 2.5 million homes and commercial properties being rented, sold or built to have an Energy Assessment this year alone. And more 'green environmental' laws are coming!

For example next year nearly every commercial property with air-conditioning must have an Assessment before the January 2011 deadline.

Applicants are therefore required to train now as multi-skilled 'Property Professionals' to carry out commercial and air-conditioning Energy Assessments and many other roles such as Flood and Fire Risk Assessments, Energy Audits, Insulation Surveys, Property Valuations, Home Condition Reports, Public Buildings Assessments etc.

No previous experience is necessary, training to join this new growth industry can usually be taken around current job at our nationwide training centres approved by the Government-appointed Awarding Body for the Built Environment and is subsidised. On qualifying start your own energy business, work for other Assessment Providers or be available for potential full or part-time work through our Energy Assessor Panel with earnings of £50 to £1,200 per Assessment.

Ring today for an interview and find out more about a career opportunity in this fast-expanding, new 'green' industry.

Kent League Division One

Folkestone 1st XI v The Mote 1st XI

FOLKESTONE missed the chance to move into the top three in Division One thanks to a losing draw against The Mote at Cheriton Road.

Just nine points separated the sides going into the match, but neither side could find the break needed to secure victory on Saturday.

The visitors batted first and made a solid start with openers James Marriott (56) and Tom Harvey (46) causing Folkestone early problems. Ashok Kaydem and Joshua Bryen stemmed the flow of runs with two wickets apiece.

However, Folkestone were unable to stop James Hodgson (73) and Daniel Thirkell (77) putting The Mote in a strong position.

After their allotted 50 overs, Folkestone were set 278 to win.

Despite losing Nick Graham for just eight runs, Folkestone's batsmen led the run chase well.

It proved to be a difficult day for bowlers all round as The Mote's attack also struggled to find a steady flow of wickets.

Joshua Bryen hit a competent unbeaten 85 to lead the charge for Folkestone, but it was not enough for the home side on the day, as they reached 212 for 3 after 50 overs.

However, Sibton's bowlers produced a destructive display to bowl out the home side for just 41. Trevor Lewis ripped through the top and middle order finishing with stunning figures of 5 for 13.

KENT LEAGUE DIVISION FIVE

Betteshanger Colliery 1st XI v Offham 1st XI

DESPITE scoring just 95, Betteshanger Collier wrapped up a 23-run victory thanks to impressive bowling from Andrew and Michael McNicholas.

Offham had Betteshanger in trouble after dismissing them for 95 from 34 overs as Chris Garton provided the only resistance with a knock of 48.

In reply, Offham struggled to find any rhythm and were quickly in danger of an embarrassing defeat. The McNicholas's claimed four wickets apiece to bowl Offham out for 72 and record a surprise victory.

KENT LEAGUE DIVISION ONE

Sandwich Town 1st XI v Lordswood 1st XI

SANDWICH Town came close to ending Lordswood impressive start to the season in a narrow two-wicket defeat.

Town, lying third in the league, were hoping to close the gap to the league leaders but could only score 197 from their 50 overs. David Draper was the star of the innings with a knock of 60.

The victory looked to be on for Sandwich as their bowlers quickly dismissed Lordswood's openers for just 12. Lordswood kept chipping away at the total set by Sandwich and managed to surpass it with three overs remaining.

KENT FEEDER LEAGUE EAST 1A

Bobbing Court &amp; Lower Halstow 1st XI v Deal Victoria 1st XI

JUST two wickets was the winning margin for Deal Victoria in a close encounter at Bobbing Court & Lower Halstow.

The hosts, helped by Gary Ryan (35) and Daniel Ball (31), reached 139 as they found it hard going against Deal's bowling attack. Sam Killip ripped through the tail finishing with figures of 4 for 31.

A middle order batting collapse from Deal gave Bobbing Court a chance of victory, but the innings was rescued by the tail, who hung on to complete the win inside 37 overs.

Invicta in stout display against Gills

Picture: IGOR KUPCO

CONTENT: Neil Cugley would have been happy with his young squad and their performance against Gillingham

FOLKESTONE Invicta began their pre-season campaign on Saturday with a tough test against newly-promoted League One side Gillingham.

A crowd of 485 turned out for the game at the Buzzlines Stadium, which was Gillingham's first since their League Two play-off final triumph at Wembley in May.

Gills boss Mark Stimson brought his first-team down to meet Neil Cugley's new look Invicta, which featured new signing Michael Yianni and trialist Billy Summerville.

The visitors started brightly and forced a number of saves from Folkestone goalkeeper Jack Delo. Invicta's best chance of the first half fell to James Everitt, but his shot was saved by Alan Julian.

Gillingham's class shone through and they wrapped a 3-0 victory. Luke Rooney opened the scoring on 26 minutes and was followed by goals from Mark McCammon and Chris Palmer in the second half.

Elsewhere at the club, former Gills striker Jacob Arnold-Smith, who was on loan at Invicta last season, will not be rejoining for the coming campaign.

Arnold-Smith who featured heavily for Invicta towards the end of last season, has secured a place at a university in Scotland. While he is completing his studies, the forward will train with Scottish side Falkirk.

CATCH OF THE DAY

Bait up, there's big bass to be found

By TONY HILLS, a keen beach and boat angler with 50 years' experience fishing Dungeness and District and vice-chairman of the Dungeness Angling Association

WITH the sudden change to unsettled weather we are now fishing autumn conditions, with small codling being caught at Dungeness.

PIRATE SPRINGS AND LITTLESTONE: If the wind blows south to south-east, this area can fish after dark.

DUNGENESS: Around the point should throw up some big bass – the biggest I have heard of so far is more than 16lb. Low water going into dark should be best and classic worm baits should produce results. Don't be surprised to catch a few small codling until the water clears.

DENCEMARSH & GALLOWAYS: Depending on the tide, these venues are great surf beaches in a south-westerly, up to a force five. Again bass would be the target, with sole number one if the wind drops after dark.

JURYS GAP: In these conditions it can be difficult being so shallow, but again after dark should be best.

BOAT-FISHING: The banks still offer the best chance, with plaice, dabs and black bream. Rough ground is producing mixed species including codling. With the water churned up by the weather, it is worth trying dragging baits in deep water.

Birchall signs, now Hess eyes up Southall reunion

FOOTBALL

BY TOM HOWARD

FORMER Barnet striker Adam Birchall has joined Dover Athletic on a two-year deal and former Gillingham player Nicky Southall could also be joining the Whites.

Birchall, the 24-year-old striker, agreed terms on Monday and becomes Dover's fourth summer signing.

With Birchall joining the Whites, Hessenthaler is no longer pursuing trialist striker Lassana Sidibe, who featured for the club during the final games of last season.

Hessenthaler admitted it took time to persuade Maidstone-born Birchall but feels he will significantly add to his strike force.

He told Yourdover: "Adam comes to us with great pedigree by starting his career at Arsenal and I am delighted to have got him. He is a local lad and this season we have had to look at local players because of the geography of Dover."

"I think if we were located a lot nearer London, the likes of Charlie Sheringham would have joined us. It took some time to persuade Adam as he is dropping to non-league, but I am sure he will enjoy it here."

NEW SIGNING: Former AFC Wimbledon midfielder Tom Davis made his debut for Dover during their pre-season friendly defeat to Barnet on Saturday

Picture: SIMON HARRIS

The Whites began their pre-season campaign on Saturday with a 2-1 defeat at home to League Two side Barnet. Summer signings Lee Hook, Jake Leberl and Tom Davis featured alongside a number of trialists. Frannie Collin scored Dover's goal during the first half.

Former Gills winger Southall played 90 minutes for the Whites and Hessenthaler believes there is a chance he could join the club on permanent basis for next season.

He said: "We will be certainly talking to him about a possible deal. It all depends on the budget really I will have to talk to the chairman to see if we can do it."

Right-back Matt Fish will miss the start of the season to undergo a shoulder operation.
